POULTRY SHOW WILL OPEN ON WEDNESDAY, AND EXCELLENT EXHIBIT IS NOW IN PLACE

tion's big annual show—the seventh since its organization—completed all the following preliminary details today and will be open to the public on schedule time— the second best White Leghorn cock-10 o'clock Wednesday morning at 366 erel in the show. Twenty-fourth street. It will continue until Saturday night.

Already there are 400 birds entered. They are attractively arranged in tiers, two coops deep, along the east and west walls and down the center for the entire length of the big build-The Rhode Island Reds lead in point of numbers. Then come in order, The Leghorns, Orphingtons, Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and dark Cornish All are great big handsome birds which, at this early date, assure the present exhibit's success.

James A. Tucker arrived this morning from St. Paul, Minn., to act as judge. He rested from his long trip only a few minutes and then became immediately busy at the task in He is being assisted by C. F. Williams, editor and manager of the Northwest Poultry Journal, Salem, Oregon, Secretary J. H. Shafer, of the Weber County Poultry association, and It is probable Mr. Tucker will be able to announce the entire entry list and prize winners tomorrow
